

What College Professors Expect of Students

- Regular class attendance.
- Being in class on time and staying the entire time!
- Using professionally appropriate language in class (not profanity).
- Doing all assignments and readings, even if they're not for a grade.
- Ability to state what you read or hear in your own words.
- Ability to find additional information in the library or Internet when needed.
- Willingness to ask questions when you don't understand something.
- Willingness to work with others in a group when required.
- Ability to know the difference between fact and fiction.
- Ability to see causes and effects, to see similarities and differences, to draw conclusions.
- Ability to listen with an open mind to others without making snap judgments.
- Ability to use the vocabulary of the course correctly.
- Willingness to learn.
- Ability to read college-level textbooks.
- Ability to write on a college level.
- Willingness to get help with assignments when needed and know where to get it!
- Taking notes in class and participating in class discussion.
- Turning in homework on time.
- Not eating in class.
- Completing assignments on time even if you're absent.
- Turning OFF cell phones in class.
- Asking questions about the format of tests (multiple-choice; T/F, etc.), amount of time to take, what it covers, etc.
- Asking about your grade status before midterms.
- Asking about your grade status before finals.
- Asking questions about assignments that you don't understand.
- Leaving children at home.
- Taking responsibility for work in class.