Outcomes	Assessments – How it is met & When it is met
1. Explain the philosophical underpinnings and values associated with the foundation of American government, specifically that of its three main branches.	Discussion forums or in-class group discussions that require students to use and relate key terms from the text and other credible and/or scholarly sources selected by the student throughout the term. Students should generate unique conclusions on the structures, values, and relationships between the three branches of government. Additionally, students are required to conduct an interview with questions on diversity, ultimately producing conclusions on diversity from the interview transcript.
2. Explain the nature and functions of American bureaucratic institutions, independently, and as they relate to three main branches of government.	Discussion forums as described in Outcome 1, site visit to local government report, middle and end of the term.. Students should generate unique conclusions on the role of bureaucrats and bureaucratic institutions and offices in civil and political society.
3. Explain the nature and functions of the four political intermediaries that exist in the American political system: news media, public opinion, political parties, and elections; examine the political efficacy associated with each.	Discussion forums as described in Outcome 1, middle and end of the term. Students should decipher and predict the changing compositions and roles of these political intermediaries in civil society.
4. Explain the complex relationships among multiple aspects of American government reviewed thus far, including its values, branches, bureaucracies, and political intermediaries.	Mid-term essay/video project exam. In response to an assigned paper question, craft a unique thesis on the material covered in weeks early in the term. Show knowledge integration by developing a meta-narrative of previously generated conclusions from weeks early in the term.
5. Explain the fundamental principles of the Constitutional Bill of Rights and the relationship of those principles to issues of civil liberties and social justice.	Discussion forums, middle and late in the term. Generate conclusions on the status of social justice issues and relate those statuses to existing policies and observable political activity. Generate conclusions on the status of civil liberties and the relationship between civil liberties and civil rights.
6. Explain the history, strategies, and role of American foreign policy and political efficacy in the policy formulation and policy execution processes.	Discussion forums late in the term. Draw conclusions on policy priorities in a policy environment of scarce resources.
7. Explain the role, strategies, and history of domestic policy, including but not limited to, welfare, healthcare, and religion /race policies and the political efficacy in the policy formulation and policy execution processes.	Discussion forums. Final group projects on policy analysis (phase 1 –description of policy, phase 2 – analysis and presentation of policy conclusions) late in the term. Engage in group discussion, exercise conflict resolution, and generate group-based conclusions detailing multiple perspectives on one policy process and outcome.

III. Examination Policy:

The reasons a student will be excused from taking an examination:

Course Number: POLT 1010
Semester / Session: Spring 2026/Session B

Course Title: American National Government
Start / End Date: 3/16/2026-5/8/2026

- a. Hospitalization (with documented verification)
- b. Death in the immediate family (with documented verification)
- c. Personal illness or illness in immediate family - (doctor's excuse required).
 - A student who does not submit a midterm or final paper will receive a zero in that grade category.
 - The paper will only be accepted within one week of the due date (with points off for late submission).

IV. Class Attendance and Homework Make-Up Policy:

Adopt a scholarly approach to classroom discussions and interactions online. This includes reading each other's opinions and reacting in controlled, responsible ways so that each student engages with the assigned topic and refrains from attacking, reprimanding, or patronising fellow students. "Responsible" interactions include but are not limited to addressing the material and developing informed opinions, respectfully disagreeing with each other if necessary, and supporting each other when analytically justified.

This is an asynchronous course; therefore, attendance is measured in the regularity with which the student submits assignments. The student doesn't need to log in a required number of times per week. Any assignment submitted over one week after the due date will be heavily penalized unless the student is in an emergency that has been discussed with the instructor ahead of time. See section above for details on what constitutes an emergency. Penalties for this type of work often result in very few points being assigned, and they are assigned at the instructor's discretion. No work, including any final exams or projects, will be accepted beyond the last day of the course.
